

B.Com. (H)

Program outcomes

Commerce is a field in which we study several issues that affect the corporate world such as social, political, legal, economic, and so on. The programme specific outcomes for B.Com. (H) students include the following:

- Demonstration of a stronger understanding of the business environment, both theoretically and practically.
- Knowledge application to comprehend the dynamic of the corporate world and its impact on the economy from numerous angles.
- Demonstration of extensive knowledge of numerous procedures and procedural flaws that can disrupt an organization's operations.
- Using one's disciplinary understanding of theories and principles to solve challenges in the commercial sector.
- Discussions about dealing with both qualitative and quantitative data, as well as using certain software, to get students accustomed to how to analyse results and draw appropriate conclusions using critical judgements.
- Multidisciplinary approach to business, which derives from the fields of economics, politics, law, mathematics, etc., is demonstrated.
- Broad understanding of current issues, academic research on related themes, as well as the methods and abilities needed to understand current problems.
